

Jay Harris – Biography

Jay Harris is a member of Cowessess First Nation in Saskatchewan. He is presently a non-licensed nuclear operator at Bruce Power in Ontario. Jay was once a technician in the Canadian Airforce, a Regular member (Constable) of the RCMP, and worked as a consultant and contract investigator for First Nations in Manitoba, and Ontario. Jay led the most northern police investigation in Canadian history in 2001 within 90 miles of the geographic North Pole to recover a deceased Japanese national while serving in Resolute Bay, Nunavut.

In 2011 Jay was the first Canadian Aboriginal Person to attend the World Nuclear University leadership development program located at Oxford, England. Jay is particularly interested in the relationship of nuclear energy in the electric grid, and it's continued expansion into non-traditional markets such as synthetic transport fuels.